

TESTIMONY AGAINST BIANCO

THE ITALIAN WIFE-MURDERER ON TRIAL—ONE WITNESS SAYS THAT HE ACTED LIKE A CRAZY MAN.

The trial of Antonio Bianco, the Italian charged with the murder of his wife, was resumed in Part II of General Sessions before Judge Fitzgerald yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Rosalind Zamorelli, with whom Bianco's victim boarded, was the first witness. Josephina Monzo, the husband of Mrs. Rosalind Zamorelli, also testified. Before May 25, 1893, he said, the time of the killing, he had upon several occasions talked with Bianco about the intention of Berolini and Mrs. Bianco coming to live at his house. He had told Bianco that he had no objection to Berolini coming to his house, but he objected to Mrs. Bianco, as there might be trouble.

Bianco said: "Oh, if my wife wants to live with another man, let her go where she pleases." Witness said that after Mrs. Bianco and Berolini had come to live at his house, Bianco frequently called, to see his wife, and Monzo thought they had occasionally quarreled.

After his wife had left him, Bianco met Berolini in the street, and in one conversation about $30 which Berolini owed Bianco, Monzo was present when Berolini paid Bianco. Monzo was present at the meeting. Upon this occasion Bianco said nothing to Berolini about his wife.

Philip H. Daniels, passenger agent, told about the trial of the arrest of the prisoner. Berolini identified Bianco as the man who had shot him. Mrs. Bianco was lying on the floor.

Rosa Germino testified that when Bianco and Berolini came to live at his house, Bianco frequently called, to see his wife, and Monzo thought they had occasionally quarreled.

After his wife had left him, Bianco met Berolini in the street, and in one conversation about $30 which Berolini owed Bianco, Monzo was present when Berolini paid Bianco. Monzo was present at the meeting. Upon this occasion Bianco said nothing to Berolini about his wife.

The trial was adjourned until 11 o'clock this morning.
